Mothers and fathers can reconcile work and family tasks, recognising that both share these responsibilities. Family responsibilities, such as (1) raising children, or caring for the elderly, should not be seen as a women's job only, but also as that of men, as (2) well as of the entire society. Alicia, from Venezuela, understands the difference a (3) supportive partner can make. Her husband Claudio takes (4) equal responsibility for taking care of their family. Alicia says: "My husband helps me and I help him, (5) although I really have very little time. He supports me (6) in all possible ways, with my studies, my work, with our daughters." And with the new law in different countries which support the dual role of worker and family member, working women and men will be in a better (7) position to balance their work and family responsibilities. And it will also pave the way in building a culture of greater (8) sharing, caring and equality between men and women.

2. Circle the correct alternative (4 marks)

Teenagers' rebellion can cause young people to rebel against their own self-interests. They may reject (child / children / childhood) interests, activities, and relationships that often support self-esteem. It can cause them to engage in self-destructive behaviour – (refuse / refuses / refusing) to do school work or even physically hurting (they / them / themselves). It can also cause them to reject safe rules and restraints, resulting (in / from / to) some dangerous effects. So adolescent rebellion is not simply a matter of refusing (parents / parenting / parental) authority; it is also a matter of concern. Although the young person thinks rebellion is an act of independence, it actually (always / never / ever) is. It is really an act of dependency. Rebellion makes the young person (do / to do / doing) the opposite of what other people want. When parents feel hard-pressed by these acts of rebellion, they are best served by allowing natural consequences to occur and by (repeating / repeated / repeatedly) providing positive guidance.

On my mom's birthday today, it's hard for me not to reflect on what an amazing person she is. Not everyone is lucky to have a mother and few are lucky to have a mother like (me) mine. As with most people, I have a few people in my life who (real) really inspire me, and my mom is one of those. Throughout my life, she (always/ be) has always been there for me, inspiring me and caring about me. And I couldn't be more (gratitude) grateful to have someone like me and encouraging me. her in my life. Not only has she been there for me, (stand) standing by my side no matter what crazy phase I was in, she's also been teaching me some (memory) memorable life lessons. She may not realize it, but she's taught me so much -- SO much! And I (be) will be forever thankful for that. Today, on my mom's special day, I thought I would share those lessons with you so you could benefit from my mom's (wise) wisdom.
