2// You are the advice columnist of a magazine called Teens Magnet Magazine. Write a reply to Jane to help her improve her relationship with her parents.

I'd advise you to/ I wouldn't advise you to/ You should/ you shouldn't/ You'd better/ Don't...

First/ second/ besides

October 21st,

Dear Jane,

Hi, How are you?

I'm writing to you to help you improve your relationship with your parents and bridge the gap between you and them.

First, You'd better apologize to your parents and ask them to forgive you. Tell them that you didn't mean to anger them. Second, You shouldn't disobey your parents to make them realize that you are no longer a child. Don't forget that they set these rules to protect you. So don't try to break their rules again. Then, I'd advise you not to ignore your parents and lead an independent and a modern way of life. You are really hurting their feelings and breaking their hearts.

Moreover/ Furthermore, you should be patient and try to explain things calmly rather than being obstinate and rude.

Finally, you'd better promise them to change your behaviour and become a good girl in the future

Yours,
advice columnist

and make them proud of you.

2. Fill in the blanks with the right words from the list.

With – about – while – when – performance – stronger - needs

Arguing with your parents is totally natural for teens. From your hairstyle to your friends, your at school to your television habits, your pocket money to your future plans, it might just seem like you argue your parents about everything. this is not a pleasant state of affairs, it is normal and it will almost likely pass. In the meantime, remember to argue fairly and respectfully and argue only needed. It might be hard to stay in control while arguing with parents, but it will certainly keep your relationship than it would be otherwise.
